A VIRGINIA HOME.

Tasteful and Harmonious Design For a Country Residence.

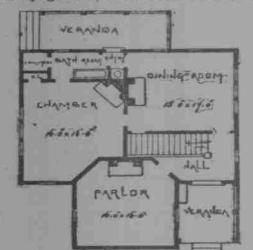

[Copyright, 1894, by Palliser, Palliser & Co., Architecta, 24 East 42d st., N. Y.] There are many things to be taken into consideration in the designing of houses for different parts of the country. This cottage is of a form that is compact and in every way available. The rooms are large, have high ceilings and at the same time afford every convenience in their arrangement, making them desirable for a family of refined tastes and moderate means. It is built of wood, though in favorable localities it would be better still of stone or brick, and if suitably surrounded with tasteful landscape embellishments will make a snug, pretty and attractive home. One can, by the exercise of appropriate taste, produce the right kind of an impres-sion in a house of this character. It should become a part of and belong to the acres which surround it. It should be an indis pensable accessory to the place itself, and the grounds should be laid out and embellished in such a manner that the whole combination impresses one with harmonious beauty, and not, as is too often the case, seek to make up for the deficiencies In the grounds by elaborate expenditure and display about the house.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

A true appreciation of a country or suburban home will not tolerate slovenly, Ill kept grounds, and no house exhibits its true value unless there is a harmony in its surroundings. If this be attended to, a high degree of effect can be produced in houses of very moderate cost—houses that shall be roomy, warm, substantial and in every way agreeable to their occupants. The glass throughout is common sheet without color, but the dividing up of the upper sashes gives character to the whole.

The plain treatment of the exterior is more than made up by the beauty of the internal arrangements, which the plans fully expinin. Architecture is young in this country, and we have to look to the mother country for many of our ideas, but because we do this we need not follow their custom in building our small houses, but we must meet the requirements of climate and habits. Therefore the arrangement of rooms

SECOND STORY.

is entirely different, and we add verandas, which are valuable appendages on account of their rendering it pleasant to sit out of

This house is substantially built and contains the modern conveniences. Is no water closet, but an earth closet is provided in connection with the bathroom, which is preferable.

Points on Economy.

Unless you have plenty of money do not spend it on elaborate mantels. Five or $10 will buy them in pine, unpainted, in good shapes, with mastic moldings that can be painted to match the woodwork and wall paper. Over the log fireplace it is desirable to have a high shelf on the chimney breast. Indian red cement makes cheaper hearths than tiles, which ought to be used in the bathroom and about sinks. There should be long French windows upon a broad plazza at the sides, where the purple clematis will grow and hammocks may swing at ease, cushions and rockers abound, that one may lounge in negligee sheltered from the gaze of the highwaymen. If one lives all the year around in the country, double sashes and weather strips will prove an economy of fuel and added comfort.-Washington

Old Colonial Fireplace.

A very handsome fireplace in the colonial style is faced with green glace tiles, with unglazed tiles of the same shade for the hearth. The fittings are of wrought fron, the fender having high posts connected by heavy bars and chains. The long narrow mantel is of wavy maple and is supported by four slender columns. The overmantel is beautifully carved and contains an oval mirror,-Exchange.

Styles In Wall Papers.

Styles of wail papers are being introduced attempting to reproduce the effects of tile, metal, lacquer and porcelain, but the end can hardly be said to justify the means in these cases, although the imitations of wood and various textile fabric effects is as nearly perfect as it is possible to get .- Architectural Monthly.
